I.T. SURVIVAL TIPS

BACKUPS

The number 1 defence against cyber attacks. Offsite and local backups are essential, so is the testing of those backups. If your backup does not restore as expected it's a failure. When did you last test the backups in your business?

UPDATE YOUR SOFTWARE

Keeping software up to date. Whatever software you are using hackers will try to get into older versions as it is often easier for them. Keeping on top of patches and fixes is a great way to help to keep you protected.

CYBER SECURITY

For the modern world, virus protection is no longer enough, you need to protect your company from the criminals who are after your data. This is achieved via a combination of data encryption, end point protection, anti ransomware and more.

WORK ANYWHERE

Realise the benefits of cloud working and leverage them for your business. Cloud based solutions are often more cost effective, offer more features and are inherently more secure.

CHOOSING THE RIGHT I.T. COMPANY

Picking an I.T. support company is very important, I.T. is central to almost every business so making the wrong decision can be detrimental.

Ultimately you need a good relationship with an I.T. provider that you trust.

Ask for testimonials and speak to some of their current clients, reviews are a good start but actually talking to their current clients can be invaluable.

A large polar bear and its cub are walking across a vast, flat expanse of ice. The bear is in the foreground, moving towards the left, with its cub following closely behind it. The background is a soft, out-of-focus blue-grey, suggesting a distant horizon or sky. The ice surface is textured with subtle ridges and grooves. A dark, rocky outcrop is visible in the bottom right corner.
